INTRODUCTION

“The Orkhon Valley represents a significant historical birthplace of ancient states in the Mongol Empire. It encompasses the city of Luut, the Mumo city of the Rouran Khaganate, the ruins of Uyghur's Kharbalgas, the sacred tombs of Turkic kings and ancestors, and the Kharkhorum city of the Mongol Empire. It is regarded as the “cradle” of Mongolian culture and history, encompassing Mongolia's civilization and historical heritage.

In the year of the white dragon, or the 15th year of Chinggis Khan's (Genghis Khan) reign, in 1220, he declared the city of “Kharkhorum” the capital of the Mongol Empire, the sacred heart of Mongolian people. He ordered its construction in the vast valley of the Orkhon River. The ancient capital of Kharkhorum was a valuable historical, political, economic, and cultural heritage center where talented scholars, artists, artisans, merchants, and ambassadors of kings and nobles from various countries settled and visited.

“Despite occupying only 0.3% of Mongolia's total land area, Ulaanbaatar accommodates roughly 50% of the population, and its growth is expected to continue.

Due to the accumulation of social, economic, and population over-concentration issues, the level of disaster risk is increasing, necessitating the need for a new city to be built.

OBJECTIVE

Establishing the principles of urban planning, top priorities, and a clear vision of New Kharkhorum City is imperative. These elements must be meticulously delineated, taking into account their interdependence and the potential for long-term success. By doing so, the city can cultivate a sustainable and thriving community that will endure for years.
